The alarming statistics on the few women in senior management positions or on Boards are what motivated the founding of Women in Governance (WIG) in 2010. The mission of our non-profit organization is to support women in their career advancement and leadership development; with our Parity Certification, we also support organizations working to close the gender gap in the workplace.

Research clearly demonstrates the positive impact of gender parity in upper management and decision-making on their innovation, employee retention, branding and financial performance. Allowing women to progress without glass ceilings or sticky floors is not only in their best interest; it is in the best interest of businesses, the economy, and our society as a whole, particularly in a context of talent shortage.

Things have changed a lot, but not fast enough! According to the World Economic Forum, it will still take about 140 years to reach gender parity. WIG helps change the timeline with its advocacy, dynamic social media, major events featuring prominent speakers, mentoring programs for executive and professional women, a robust governance training program, and the Parity Certification.

Created in 2017 with the pro bono support of McKinsey & Company, and the first of its kind in North America, the Parity Certification helps organizations increase the representation of women where they have historically been underrepresented, as well as in senior management positions.

Accenture, Mercer, and WTW support the WIG team in the assessment of applications. The robust tool not only evaluates parity at the decision-making level of an organization, but also evaluates the implementation of mechanisms that enable women at all levels to achieve career advancement, creating a pipeline of female talent. Particular attention is also given to intersectionality to ensure that BIPOC, Indigenous, and LGBTQ2S+, as well as women with disabilities are sponsored, supported, and promoted. So far, the Parity Certification has directly impacted over 700,000 employees across Canada and the United States.

Join us and contribute to the advancement of parity, diversity, and inclusion!
